

Contact: Leon Hill
Director – uSocial.net
<http://usocial.net/>
contact@usocial.net

USOCIAL LAUNCH WORLD-FIRST UNLIMITED PRESS RELEASE DISTRIBUTION

Brisbane, Australia – 11th May, 2009 – Controversial web traffic company uSocial.net have just launched what they claim is the world’s first truly unlimited press release distribution service, which has just become available for individual business and advertising agencies alike.

While not the first company to offer unlimited press release distribution, uSocial say their service is different in the way that they do not simply just post press releases to an online media wire.

“We’ve invested a considerable amount of resources gathering one of the most complete media contact lists in the world which now has over 560,000 media contacts from around the globe,” says uSocial CEO Leon Hill.

“When our clients invest in our powerful new service, we will distribute their releases to this list on their behalf, not simply just post their release online in the hope that sites like Google News might pick it up. We send press release to the places that matter; that is, direct to the inboxes of hundreds of thousands of journalists.” Hill continues.

The new service is available now from uSocial.net’s website and is priced from under one-hundred dollars per month and includes distribution for an unlimited number of press releases per month.

uSocial are famous for causing controversy over being the first company to heavily market the fact they sell votes on social bookmarking sites like Digg and Yahoo! Buzz.

---

For more information and for interviews, please email contact@usocial.net. uSocial’s website can be viewed by going to <http://usocial.net/>.